Fraternization.

No one who feels a truly patriotic love for his country, and who has had the anxieties for its safety and welfare which the present and past aspects of parties necessarily carries with such a love, but must feel his hopes revive and his breast swell with emotion as he reads the eloquent and Union-breathing speeches made at the late festival in Louisville. Whatever may be his party ties and preferences, if he is a patriot, and wishes the prosperity of his whole country, he can sympathize with the noble purpose that has carried our legislators and Governor to Louisville to fraternize with the functionaries of our sister States in this emergency of political affairs. We have read of pilgrimages to the shrines of saints and martyrs, of the devout Musselmen braving the privations and dangers of Arabian deserts to worship at the tomb of the Prophet; of Crusaders traversing sea and land to wrest the holy sepulchre from the hands of the Infidel; but nowhere have we read of so sublime a sight as that witnessed on this late occasion at Louisville.

We are told that a congress of the nations of Europe is to assemble shortly to adjust national differences; but, when we remember that in this only the most subtle and skillful diplomats are to meet—that every species of chicanery and diplomacy will be resorted to to overreach each other and gain some advantage, (and probably the result will be to enslave millions of human beings who have been struggling for ages for their liberty,) how sublime, in the contrast, does this meeting of the representatives of four great sovereignties as the peaceful guests of a great and enlightened city appear? Ought it not to bring the blush of shame to the cheeks of other representatives of those same sovereignties in another place? Their other representatives in Washington are "breathing out threatenings and slaughter," while these are banqueting together at the same feast, and nought is heard, as they pledge each other in the wine cup, but fraternity and brotherly love. These have here renewed their vows of loyalty to the Constitution under which all were born, and by whose benign influence they were reclaimed from the forest and the savage, and are now giants in strength, and prosperous and happy to a degree never witnessed by any people in any other hemisphere. Not only have they there met and thus plighted each other, but they have gone in a mass to the far-off capital of one of their number, with a full confidence of meeting a kind and hearty reception from that one which was supposed to be least friendly in its political relations to the others. This is done in all republican simplicity, and without the "pomp and circumstance" attending the royal visits and ambassadorial receptions of the old world; yet we affirm, without the fear of contradiction, that never in this world of ours was witnessed such a conning of the Representatives and Executives of four sovereign States, where there was less distrust or a more sincere fellowship and good feeling. This should not only shame political assemblies and disunion politicians, but is a worthy example to set before most religious convocations. These latter have been dissolved, and every feeling of brotherhood between the delegates from different sections was destroyed by this vexed question of slavery. They have taken this question from the political assemblies, where indeed it should never have been, and have entered upon its discussion with all the rancor characteristic of those political assemblies, but have gone further than their exemplars. Now it is high time for them to retrace their steps and follow their political prototypes in this, their good example, as well as the evil; and they can do much to bind up the wounds of the country which they have done so much to lacerate. If this unprecedented example of party and sectional abnegation, on the part of so many distinguished and exalted individuals, does not have a beneficial influence in calming sectional animosities among every class of the American people, they must be far more besotted by partisanship than we have yet believed. But it will have an influence; and it will cause the elements of discord to vanish, for it will soon be recognized that this is the spirit that animates the masses of the population, and the politicians, who are the most infallible of all barometers to indicate any change in popular sentiment, will soon begin to sing the songs of peace and hush the war chants they are piping now; the revolver and the bowie-knife will give place to the Bible and prayer-book in the bosoms of members of Congress, and we shall no more witness these formidable weapons escaping from the pockets of their owners upon the floor, to the consternation of peaceful men.

The credit of this whole thing is due primarily to the city of Louisville, and well may she be proud of this patriotic inauguration; for it is a wreath she may bind around her brow; and she may celebrate each annual return with pride and pleasure; for we predict that it will not only add to her fame as a patriotic and peace-loving city, but she has shown to hundreds of strangers, from far distant sections, her capabilities as a business place, and these will not only return to their homes with the most favorable impressions of her commercial advantages, but will communicate these impressions to others, and thus hundreds and thousands of merchants and planters will be directed to her as the best market to supply their wants, and capitalists will be also directed to her as the most promising of the rising cities in the West, and as the surest to give a return for their investments.

We think this compliment due to Louisville and her citizens, not only for their patriotism and magnificence carrying out of this patriotic enterprise, but from the intrinsic merit of her situation and capabilities for a wondrous commerce. This Nashville Railroad throws the trade of the South into her lap, and this is as rich as that of India, which all the nations of Europe are now struggling to secure.

We wait with impatience to learn the particulars of the visit of the distinguished strangers to the capital of Ohio, not that we doubt they will be cordially welcomed and worthily entertained; but this is a matter so extremely novel to the Buckeye people, that we wish to know how they demean themselves in the peculiar situation. Be the particulars what they may, the results can only be gratifying to every honest heart, and we congratulate the people of Kentucky that this most healing suggestion sprung from the bosom of our own loved State, for it shows she is not unworthy to have claimed as her own the GREAT PACIFICATOR.

[Correspondence of the Yeoman.]
From Washington.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 26, 1860.

Editor Yeoman: Mr. Keitt obtained the floor yesterday, and made an eloquent speech in reply to Mr. Corwin, whom another ballot was had—Mr. Sherman received 105 votes, which was with three votes of an election, and he may yet be elected by a positive majority, the endorsement of the Helper book notwithstanding, from which he cannot escape. Thus we have 105 men in the House who indorse that infamous book in toto. Will it require any extraordinary powers of discernment to state what the character of the legislation will be if Mr. Sherman is then elected, and should not the country be thankful that there are good and true men enough in the House determined to resist the adoption of the plurality rule?

Mr. Sherman has an abiding faith in his being Speaker; and, notwithstanding his speech that he did not care for the empty honors of the chair, exults whenever a vote is taken, and announces with a very satisfied air what the result of the vote is.

The galleries of both the Senate and House are densely crowded whenever either is in session, not because any interest is taken in the proceedings, but for the reason that nobody has anything else to do before dinner, and it is considered intensely fashionable and intellectual to attend the debates in Congress. In the absence of a Speaker money is scarce, and credit is the order of the day. Promises to pay when a Speaker is elected, are plenty.

Capt. Simms, you will regret to learn, has been confined to his room for some days by severe sickness.

Hoops have been abandoned entirely by the ladies here—that is confidential. W. D.

Gen. Robert Butler, Assistant Adjutant General to Gen. Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, died at his residence at Lake Jackson, near Tallahassee, Florida, on the afternoon of January 12th. Gen. Butler had been in firm health for a year or more, but it was only within a few days past, in consequence of attacks of a more alarming character, that serious apprehensions were felt that his long life was near its close. Only three of Gen. Jackson's prominent officers at that battle now survive, viz: Gen. Wm. O. Butler, of Kentucky, Maj. Shotard, of Mississippi, and Col. A. P. Hayne, of South Carolina.

ARRIVAL OF LEGISLATORS.

THE RECEPTION AT COLUMBUS.

Gov. Dennison's Welcoming Speech.

GOV. MAGOFFIN'S RESPONSE FOR KENTUCKY.

Col. Newcom's Response for Tennessee.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial.]

The steamers Silver Moon and Boston were chartered to meet the Strader below the city. There was a fine band of music aboard, which disengaged most excellently. As the boats neared each other an animating scene occurred. There was music and cheering, waving of handkerchiefs, and a lively fraternalism. There were cheers for Ohio, for Tennessee, for Kentucky, and for Indiana. The Boston was behind time, and the Strader and Silver Moon waited for her about half an hour. When she hove in sight her decks were covered with people, conspicuous among whom were the Gothic Greys. The crack company displayed full ranks, as usual. The Boston also had a band of music, which gave the national airs with fine effect.

The three boats were lashed abreast and swept up to the city with bands flying, bands playing, and the people in great enthusiasm.

We found the guests in good condition, a little over-fed, perhaps, but high-toned, as became the occasion. They had passed the night comfortably in the splendid and commodious Strader, and found abundance of warm breakfast awaiting them. The best feeding prevailed. The guests are of an order of men superior to those usually found on excursions; and there was agreeable evidence on all hands of the legitimacy and sincerity of the affair.

The scene on reaching the city was decidedly imposing. The bands on the boats were playing, the steam whistles at intervals were roaring like concentrated hurricanes, the cannon thundering from the shore, and the boats loaded to the guards with people, whose shouts were answered back with interest.

On the roof of one of the foundries in the lower part of the city, the workmen were out with a flag of our country, marching to the "music of the Union." Salutes were fired from the wharf and from the New-Port Barracks.

The people turned out from the city largely, and blackened the boats and the landing, showing the enthused state of popular feeling.

The boats swept grandly past the city up to the depot, where they landed.

The buildings in front of the landing were beautifully decorated with flags. The approach of the boats from below was announced by a gun from the barracks across the river, and then the brass field pieces from this side joined in, bellowing "dear mounted welcome" to the distinguished guests of Ohio. The trio of boats swarming with people—the Boston on the inside, the Silver Moon on the outside, and the majestic Strader in the center—steamed gracefully up the river, and the bands of the artillery, to a point above Broadway, where they paused in the middle of the stream, while the Silver Moon and Boston detached themselves from the Strader, the latter continuing her journey to the depot, greeted with hearty cheers, which were as heartily returned. At the depot of the Little Miami road the guests disembarked, took seats in the cars of the special train furnished by Superintendent Durand, and sped away to the capital.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 26.

The guests of Ohio arrived at three o'clock, and were received with hearty enthusiasm. The people of Columbus assembled in great numbers at the depot and on the streets, cheering the procession to the portals of the State House. The Committee of Escort and other officers conducted the guests into the Hall of the House of Representatives, where they were received by the General Assembly in joint convention.

The address of welcome was delivered in a most impressive manner by Gov. Dennison, as follows:

Friends of Kentucky, of Tennessee, and of Indiana: On behalf of the people of Ohio, speaking through the General Assembly, I receive you at this their Capital.

I must return, in behalf of the people of Ohio, and of the Legislature of Kentucky, our grateful thanks for this most cordial welcome.

We had expected a warm welcome from the people of Ohio, but were unprepared for such a greeting as we have had. It has been a magnificent pageant from the moment we set foot on the land at Cincinnati. We were received with the roar of peaceful cannon and the shouts of welcoming hosts.

"We will take home this welcome to the people of Kentucky. We will tell them of it, and we will tell them that we have to do to keep this Government together, to see each other often, and to know each other better. Coming from the great Empire State of the West—from this State renowned for her splendid educational systems and her beloved institutions—sentiment for her vast achievements, and a glow in her successful enterprises we lay to our hearts the welcome of her chivalrous sons and beautiful daughters, and the generous hospitality with which they greet us. Let me return them in behalf of her Representatives, our earnest and warmest regards for this your graceful welcome."

Gov. Magoffin then introduced Col. Newcom, of the Tennessee Legislature, who responded in behalf of the State of Tennessee. Addressing Gov. Dennison, he said:

"I desire to thank you, sir, in behalf of the people of Tennessee, and to you, fellow-citizens of the State of Ohio, and in the name of the people of Tennessee, whom I represent, I return our hearty thanks for your welcome; and to you, ladies of Ohio, Tennessee returns her thanks for your presence here on this day. We come up among you at your proud capital as brethren. We come not to invade you with hostile banners, but to engage with you in feasts of brotherly love. It is Tennessee and Kentucky that meet Ohio on this occasion, and I tell you, fellow-citizens, that while Congress cannot organize, Ohio and Tennessee and Kentucky will assemble and greet each other as brethren of our common and beloved country.

"We come together for a common purpose.

We come because we can say in the Capital of Ohio that we are brethren of one blood. We come, I say, fellow-citizens of Ohio, to renew the bonds of union here. In olden times, when our fathers met in Independence Hall to form a Constitution, it was with feelings which should inspire us now. What is the Constitution? Read but the preamble, and let us ponder it well in our minds, and keep it in our hearts. To-day, in the name of Tennessee, we are willing here to swear to it in all time to come. I say this for the Representatives of Tennessee, and I say it for the people whom we represent; and we say to you, that as the Bible is to the Christian's heart, so is the Constitution to the heart of Tennessee. We return you, then, fellow-citizens of Ohio, our warmest thanks for your most generous welcome, and believe me, we will bear the remembrance of it in our hearts."

[Enthusiastic applause.]

After the meeting dispersed, the guests were escorted to the various public institutions, and were hospitably entertained at the residences of citizens. Governor Magoffin and Lieut. Governor or Porter, of Kentucky, are the special guests of Governor Dennison.

At dark, the hotels and many stores and dwellings were brilliantly illuminated. The dome of the State House was splendidly lighted up, and the city was ablaze with pyrotechnic fires. Crowds of ladies and gentlemen thronged the streets, and there was universal hilarity abroad. After supper, the guests and their hosts assembled in the Hall of the House at a social levee, and afterwards in Odeon Hall, around the banquet table. Menter's band furnished superb music. Lieut. Governor Kirk presided, and the seats of honor were appropriately distributed.

The following regular toasts were re'd:

1. "Kentucky—Mother of wise statesmen and fair women; her younger sisters delight to do her honor."

Response by Governor Magoffin.

2. "Tennessee—The iron of her mountains, the corn of her valleys, and the cotton of her plains, represent in their union of interests the union of our people."

Response by Governor Magoffin.

3. "Ohio—Her Representatives in every department gladly welcome to her Capital the Representatives of her sister States."

Response by Senator Dennison.

4. "The States of the Great Central Valley; in war, their blood has been mingled in the common defense—in peace, their blood flows in kindest veins; in war and peace, like the branches of their great river, they will unite their interests and sympathies in a common current, whose course shall endure forever."

Response by Senator Robert G. Payne, of Tennessee.

5. "The Legislature of Kentucky."

Response by Lieutenant-Governor of Kentucky.

6. "The Legislature of Tennessee."

Response by Mr. Speaker Whittlestone.
